Christ the King

And they said to him...

When did we see you hungry?

Do you remember when I first played football for the school and I was desperate for you to come and watch...

when I grew a beard and needed your approval... when I yearned for encouragement and acceptance? That's when.

When did we see you thirsty?

Do you remember when I really wanted to know more about our family history from you...

when I asked you to teach me the guitar... when sometimes I just wanted you to hold me tight? That's when.

When did we see you a stranger?

Do you remember when I was new to the area...

when I was a friendless refugee...
 when I started at my new school... when you found out that I was of a different religion from everyone else? That's when.

When did we see you naked?

Do you remember when my business collapsed...
 when I failed my exam...

when I was publicly accused of theft...
 when I broke down under the strain?
 That's when.

When did we see you sick?

Do you remember when I was worried to distraction about my daughter...

when they laid me off work and I ended up on the dole...
 when my mother died and I was inconsolable?
 That's when.

When did we see you in prison?

Do you remember when I felt trapped in the home and needed someone to mind the children...

when I got divorced and was so alone...
 when guilt seemed to overpower me...
 when I borrowed and got into debt...
 when drink ruled my life?
 That's when.

It's the little things that count.
